Bush, Shamir meet to discuss relations

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir met Tuesday to discuss relations between the two countries.

The two leaders, in a "friendly and exchange of views" on the Persian Gulf crisis and other subjects, discussed prospects for increased ties to Israel's Arab foes. Bush said to ease Israel's immigration in weaponry, an American official said.

Bush voiced U.S. concerns about treatment of Palestinians living in the Israeli occupied territory, but said, though the president did not bring up the touchy matter of the killing of 17 Palestinians by Israeli soldiers during an October riot at a Jerusalem holy site.

He did Bush press Shamir to cooperate with a planned United Nations investigation of that incident, but their discussion "evolved that without that subject coming up," Kelly said.

Shamir told reporters he felt assured by Bush that the United States would not accept a deal with Iraq that would threaten Israel, especially in view of Israel's increasing edginess over U.S. alliances in the region. He has said it several times, and he said it to me now again, that there will not be any deal at the expense of Israel," Shamir said after spending nearly two hours with Bush and his aides.

Having promised the United States it will lie low in the Persian Gulf crisis, Israeli leaders have indicated fear that the administration would accept a diplomatic solution that would leave intact Iraq's stores of chemical and biological weapons.

Israel also is worried about Bush's plans to sell Saudi Arabia some $20 billion in sophisticated arms and has asked for an increase in U.S. military aid to offset the unprecedented sale.

"The prime minister was assured by the president that we will maintain a qualitative edge in armaments for Israel, but at the same time we want to help out with the legitimate self-defense needs of our Arab friends in the region," Kelly told reporters after the meeting.

On immigration, Shamir told Bush that Israel "would be looking for additional help" to cope with influx of Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union and Ethiopia.

Shamir did not ask for a specific amount, and Bush was generally supportive, Kelly said.

But he said the administration was waiting to see the impact of its current loan program, under which the United States has guaranteed $400 million in loans for new immigrant housing on condition that the homes not be built in the occupied territories.

Shevardnadze urges U.S. to prevent war

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said the Bush administration Tuesday should make a last-ditch diplomatic effort to avert war in the Persian Gulf.

"It is also my strong hope that U.S. officials will not see action," Shevardnadze said at a news conference near the end of a two-day meeting here with Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

Referring to the high-level talks between Bush and Shevardnadze, the Soviet foreign minister said, "I have much hope on the coming days."

Baker said Baghdad had still not agreed on a date for him to go to Iraq to see President Saddam Hussein. He offered any time between Jan. 1 and Jan. 3, but again rejected the Iraqi attempt to delay the visit until after the Jan. 15 deadline for the U.N. Security Council for Iraq to pull out or face the prospect of military measures.

Baker gave a positive account of the U.S.-Soviet meetings in his home town, no agreements were announced except that Shevardnadze said the two sides had decided to suspend weapons shipments to warring factions in Afghanistan.

The foreign minister said the date of the cutoff had not been set. And he said he did not expect an agreement on such issues as assistance to rehabilitate the war-torn country "in the near term."

Shevardnadze bluntly appealed for U.S. food aid before a meeting Monday with Baker. And officials in Washington said the White House could unveil an economic assistance package for the Soviet Union as early as Wednesday when Bush meets with Shevardnadze.

Extensive discussion of the Persian Gulf crisis apparently slowed consideration by Baker and Shevardnadze of remaining roadblocks to a treaty to reduce U.S. and Soviet long-range weapons stockpiles.

However, they planned to meet Tuesday night to consider the results of bargaining between their arms experts.

Shevardnadze said no date had been set for Bush to go to Moscow to sign the treaty at a summit meeting with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"We are facing a difficult task. ... We have to complete a historic agreement and have it ready for signing by the time President Bush pays a historic visit to Moscow," Shevardnadze said.

Among the unsettled issues are how to police the treaty to make sure provisions to reduce U.S. and Soviet long-range bombers, missiles and submarines by about 30 percent are not undercut.

The crisis in the gulf that began with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 dominated the talks held in Houston.

Hostages continue to leave gulf

Associated Press

Nearly 500 more foreigners flew out of Iraq and occupied Kuwait on Tuesday, ending four months at swords' point following the Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate.

One freed British hostage said he saw bodies on the street outside his Kuwait hideout Tuesday morning.

Three chartered flights brought 243 foreigners from Kuwait to Baghdad to join hundreds of other hostages on three chartered jetliners that left Iraq for Bangkok, London and Frankfurt.

Callum Strachan, dressed in a traditional kilt from his native Scotland, saluted the other hostages by playing his bagpipes as the foreigners cleared Iraqi passport control.

"The people who deserve the greatest admiration are the Kuwaitis who sheltered us despite the fact that they could be executed on the spot if they were found helping us," said 61-year-old Briton Ken Emsden.

He said there was still gunfire every night in Kuwait and that he saw the bodies of four civilians in the street Tuesday morning.

"We're just happy it's finally over," said Sid Hatcher, 35, of Knoxville, Tenn., who was held at an industrial site in Iraq.

Diplomats said just 14 Americans were on the flights from Baghdad.

There were no Americans on the flights from Kuwait to Baghdad.

"We must have gotten them all," said one American consular official, referring to earlier evacuation flights from the Persian Gulf emirate.

He spoke on condition of anonymity.

In Washington, the Bush administration said a planned evacuation flight Thursday is "likely to be the last" for Americans and will probably also carry home the remaining staff of the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait.

"We would anticipate that once all Americans who want out have been able to get out that we would remove the entire staff of the embassy," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The plane bound for Frankfurt on Tuesday carried 16 freed hostages. The flight to London carried 310 people, nearly all of them Britons.

A Japanese-chartered jetliner left Baghdad for Bangkok with 159 people aboard, including 14 Japanese diplomats from Kuwait.

Nearly all the others on the plane to Bangkok were former Japanese hostages.

Diplomats said about 400 Americans were expected to remain in Iraq and Kuwait. These remaining people were mainly people with dual U.S.-Iraqi citizenship or American spouses of Iraqis.

Heavy fog blamed for 75-vehicle pileup

15 dead, 51 injured in Tennessee crash

Associated Press

CALHOUN, Tenn. — Two chain reaction crashes in dense fog on a highway in southeastern Tennessee killed 15 people Tuesday, injured more than 50 and left the roadway looking like a war zone.

A morning fog covered Interstate 75 over the Hiwassee River, about 40 miles north of Chattanooga, when the 75-vehicle pileup began about 9:30 a.m., said Cecil Whaley, director of the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency.

People involved in the accident, which covered more than a mile of the interstate, described hearing booms in the fog as dozens of tractor-trailers collided with each other and with cars.

Whaley confirmed 15 dead, but he said the number could rise as crews searched the burned shells of vehicles. In some cases, only nameplates distinguished the wreckage of a car smashed into the side of a truck.

"This is one of the worst accidents that anyone can remember happening in Tennessee in terms of the number of vehicles and fatalities involved," said Whaley, who followed rescue efforts from his Nashville office.

Names of the victims would not be immediately released because some of the bodies were burned beyond recognition, Whaley said.

Authorities believe an initial accident occurred in the southbound lane, and cars jumping the median or people rubbernecking to see the southbound crash may have caused the second pileup in the northbound lane.

Russell Newman, eastern district regional director of the Tennessee Emergency Medical Agency, says no one is really sure what happened.

"It's just a conjecture as to what caused it, but it was just one of those damn chain reaction collisions that happen in this kind of situation — very heavy fog and probably too much speed," Newman said.

War causes starvation in Liberia

Associated Press

MONROVIA, Liberia — Four-year-old Falah Saah, too weak from starvation to cry out, could only murmur listlessly as he lay in his mother's lap.

"I want drink, drink, drink," he said softly, nearly drowned out by the moans from other sick children in the ward at Island Hospital, one of only two hospitals still operating in Monrovia, the capital of war-wrecked Liberia.

His mother, Maita Solui, said he is one of only three of her seven children to survive the West African country's yearlong civil war.

Hundreds of children have died of starvation, and doctors say that unless a huge food aid program is launched, thousands more will succumb.

Other youngsters, brutalized by seeing mothers raped and fathers, brothers and sisters killed, became child soldiers in the rebel armies. Falah's eldest brother joined up and was killed.

The physical and mental condition of the surviving children has raised fears about the future generation of this West African nation. Relief workers say the degree of starvation has been so great that many children who live will suffer brain damage.

The child soldiers suffer in other ways. At the rebel base in Caldwell, outside the capital, a young boy played with a remote-control toy car. Draped over his shoulder was a machine gun — a real one.

"I'm a man, I have killed like a man," boasted another little boy. He looked 6 or 7 years old, with a gun nearly as tall as he was, but refused to give his age.

For orphans who have watched their parents killed by Liberian troops, the rebel camp offered a substitute family, food and an opportunity for revenge.

"They are still little children, but how are we going to convince them of that when it's all over?" said relief agent Myrtle Gibson. "How are we going to make them real people again?"

Hammer a tireless crusader

By DALLAS SCHOLLES
Senior Reporter
and Associated Press

Industrialist Armand Hammer was remembered Tuesday as a tireless crusader for international peace who improved the human condition by investing millions in education, medicine and the arts.

Hammer died at his home on Monday night after a brief illness. He was 92.

One of Hammer's greatest humanitarian acts was to convince the Soviet Union to accept medical aid for victims of the Chernobyl nuclear accident.

Hammer arranged for U.S. specialists to visit the USSR to perform bone-marrow transplants.

Hammer was born in New York City, May 21, 1898, and became a self-made millionaire by the time he was 23.

He did it by rescuing his family's pharmaceutical firm while he attended and graduated from Columbia University medical school.

In addition to financial success, his political influence was far reaching. Hammer had as much influence in the Kremlin as he did on Wall Street.

His Russian-born father, Julius Hammer, moved to the United States in 1875 and became one of the founders of the American Communist Party, an organization that Hammer never joined himself.

"I tell them ... that I don't think their system works," Hammer said to communists.

"But that doesn't keep us from doing business," Hammer negotiated many deals with communist countries to develop their resources and used his influence to motivate U.S. presidents to meet with leaders in the USSR.

Hammer's financial empire was based on Occidental Petroleum Corp. Hammer purchased it in 1957 for $100,000 and turned it into one of the nation's largest industries.

And yes, he had an interest in the baking soda — but not at first.

Hammer was named after Armand Duval, a character in Alexander Dumas' novel, "La Dame aux Camelias," but he did not become the king of baking soda until recently. There was an earlier attempt to purchase the Arm and Hammer Baking Soda Company from the Church & Dwight Company in 1950.

Student prepares for war BYU Army Reservist may be activated soon

By AMY ROMNEY
Universe Staff Writer

The Army Reserves' 186th Petroleum Supply Unit is in a position that it could be called to war with only three days' notice, a BYU student and member of the unit said.

Amy Moore, 20, a junior majoring in humanities from Spokane, Wash., said it is a scary thought to think that at any time she could be called to war.

However, there are many things the unit has done to prepare for war.

"One of the main things that has prepared me for war is every summer I spend two weeks at a training camp which is a pretend war. I get hands-on experience of what I would really be doing in a war."

"Training camp is not fun and games because I am tested on everything, which makes it a very high pressure situation," Moore said.

The 186th Unit is in charge of refueling helicopters (while airborne) and also tanks. It is like a mobile gas station, she said.

Moore is a supply specialist in charge of food and equipment for the unit.

"Because I am in the position to be called up at anytime with only three days' notice there are some things I have done to be prepared. I know exactly what I need to do to withdraw from school and get out of my rental agreements," she said.

"I wrote my will last weekend with my unit."

Moore said she feels it was a good decision to join the Army Reserves because it has helped her get through school, which is her main goal.

She said her family is supportive but is not exactly happy because they believe women should not go to war.

When Moore joined the Army Reserves, she was told women did not have to go to war. Now, that doesn't seem to be the case, she said.

"A lot of being prepared is my attitude. I have to realize that I will be fighting for a good reason and purpose. It is the United States' business to be over in the Persian Gulf and I feel we are not overstepping our bounds.

"I feel it is important that our nation is concerned with what is happening in the world," Moore said.

Political parties now allowed in Albania

VIENNA, Austria — The ruling Communist Party in Albania, the last country practicing Stalinism in Europe, on Tuesday decided to allow the formation of political parties, the state news agency ATA said.

The surprise announcement to liberalize politics in this country of 3.1 million residents was made in a communique released after a meeting of the party's policy-setting Central Committee in the capital of Tirana.

"The plenum was of the opinion that the creation of independent political organizations according to the law in force is to the good of the further democratization of the life of the country and pluralism."

The Balkan nation, which opened its borders slightly this year after decades of isolationism under the rule of the late Enver Hoxha, would be the last country in Europe to introduce a multiparty system.

Albania broke relations with the Soviet Union in 1961 over Hoxha's Stalinist and pro-Chinese policies.

Sixteen years later, Albania severed ties with the Chinese.

Albania has scheduled elections for Feb. 10. They are seen as a test of the government's willingness to live up to pledges of gradual reform and of the populace's ability to exercise a measure of political freedom after decades of authoritarian rule.

But it was not immediately clear if there will be enough time for new political parties to form and compete in the elections.

Oil prices fuel increasing trade deficit

WASHINGTON — The nation's foreign trade deficit, hurt by higher oil prices and increased military spending from the Persian Gulf crisis, widened a sharp 13.9 percent in the July-September quarter, the government said Tuesday.

The Commerce Department said the $25.6 billion third quarter deficit was up from a second quarter deficit of $22.5 billion.

It was the largest quarterly imbalance since a $26.7 billion gap in the final three months of 1989.

The new report covered the current account, which is considered the most important yardstick of the country's international performance because it measures not only trade in merchandise but also trade in services and investment flows between countries.

The higher deficit in the July-September quarter was viewed as especially ominous because an improving trade balance had been the only bright spot in a lackluster economy this year.

Teen tried to kill N.Y. jogger, jury says

NEW YORK — A 16-year-old on Tuesday became the first defendant convicted of attempted murder in the gang rape of the Central Park jogger. A second youth was acquitted of the same charge and convicted of lesser charges.

Spectators erupted in anger and shock when the verdicts were returned against Kevin Richardson and Kharey Wise after 12 days of jury deliberation.

Richardson's mother, Grace Cuffey, fainted, and the courtroom was cleared while she was treated with oxygen at her seat.

"You're going to pay for this. Jesus is going to get you. You made this ... up," Wise told prosecutor Elizabeth Lederer as he was led from the courtroom in handcuffs.

Richardson, 16, was convicted of attempted murder, rape, sodomy, robbery, assault and riot. Wise, 18, loudly cursed Lederer after he was acquitted of 10 of 13 counts against him, including attempted murder, rape and sodomy. He was convicted of first-degree assault, sexual abuse and riot.

Three other teen-agers were convicted in August of rape and assault in the case.

Trump divorce final, but who gets what?

NEW YORK — A tearful Ivana Trump was divorced Tuesday from her millionaire husband, Donald, whose "cruel and inhuman treatment" was cited for the end of their 12-year marriage.

But the dissolution of the marriage left unresolved exactly who will get what from the troubled Trump empire and whether the couple's marital agreement giving The Donald the lion's share will hold.

"There are two parts to any marriage: One, 'Are we married?' And two, 'Do I owe you any money?' Today's we've cleared the way for the real issue: division of property," said Trump's lawyer, Jay Goldberg.

The judge said all other money matters such as child support, equitable distribution of property and the validity of any pre- and post-marital agreement will be decided at an April 11 trial, unless they are otherwise resolved.

Mrs. Trump, assisted by attorney Michael Kennedy, left the courthouse in tears after the divorce was approved by state Judge Phyllis Gangel-Jacob.

Soviet, rebel leader to discuss Angola

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union's top diplomat will meet here on Wednesday with the leader of the Angolan rebel group which has been fighting the Soviet-backed government for more than 15 years.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze told a news conference in Houston that he has agreed to meet with Jonas Savimbi, whose UNITA rebels have been fighting the leftist government in Luanda since shortly after it seized power.

It is the first meeting between Shevardnadze and Savimbi.

At the same time, the State Department announced that Angolan Foreign Minister Pedro de Castro van Dunem will meet separately with Baker on Wednesday. Baker met with Angolan President Jose Eduardo dos Santos last March in Namibia.

The United States and the Soviet Union have been supporting rival factions in Angola's civil war, but lately have been encouraging the two sides to negotiate.

Y Finance Society educates youth

By TRENT E. POOR
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU Finance Society and Junior Achievement Inc. of Utah have put together business consulting teams in a program striving to educate school kids about the business world, said the vice president of Junior Achievement of Utah.

Student volunteers from BYU's Finance Society serve as consultants to fifth- and sixth-grade students and teach them business techniques, said Elaine Fawcett, vice president of educational service for Junior Achievement of Utah.

The volunteers teach a series of four classes to the students.

The students are responsive and seem to enjoy the program, said Eric Bailey, a vice president of the Finance Society. "Everyone seems to be really positive. The students participate and answer questions."

Peter Fatianow, executive vice president of the BYU Finance Society, said, "We have many more Finance Society members that are interested in this teaching program than positions available.

We hope to work with Junior Achievement next year and to expand the program to make it more available to the kids and to those members who want to share their business knowledge."

Margaret Vanleuven, a teacher at Timpanogos Elementary, said she first became involved because it sounded like something the kids could enjoy.

The students were cheering when the consultants taught them about unit production versus mass production, said Vanleuven.

The students formed an assembly line to assemble pens and competed against students who tried to put complete pens together by themselves.

They also divided into groups and played management roles as they made decisions about managing a video store or hot dog stand.

"It made the students aware of the things it takes to start up and maintain a business," said Vanleuven.

Provo City Council decides to ban parking on 700 North

By JON PETTY
Universe Staff Writer

Parking on 700 North will be banned as of May 1, 1991, decided the Provo City Council Tuesday night, following a 90-minute public hearing.

The council voted 6-0 to red curb the entire section of the street from 900 East to 200 West. Environmental and safety concerns were cited as the major reasons for the decision, said Mayor Joseph A. Jenkins.

The council voted on the parking ban despite a plea from a BYUSA representative to postpone a decision until more BYU students could voice their concerns on the matter.

Banning on-street parking on 700 North is part of a plan to increase the flow of east-west traffic south of campus. "We are under strict compliance regulations from the EPA to reduce carbon dioxide levels (in Provo City)," said Jenkins. "We have to create a traffic flow, and changing the structure of 700 North is one of the ways (the city) is going to do it."

In addition to carbon dioxide regulations, councilmembers discussed the blindspots that parked cars can create.

Lanny M. Brown, an executive vice-president of BYUSA, testified at the hearing that BYU students needed more time to give their opinions before the ban was approved.

After a meeting with BYUSA President, Brett Blake, Brown proposed the council delay its vote.

"Most students are strapped with for time with finals exams just hours away. An issue such as this that has such a tremendous effect on students should not be scheduled during finals." Brown said.

Several residents of 700 North area, including BYU students, testified at the hearing at Provo City Center.

"I can't count the number of accidents I've seen on 400 and 300 East," said Tom Nufer, 25, a business major from Houghton, Mich. who lives on 700 North.

Parked cars create blindspots for cars pulling out, Nufer said. "Safety should be the number one concern."

"Safety first, convenience second" was one of the council's major reasons for deciding to eliminate parked cars. "I was a police officer for 22 1/2 years," said one council member, "I have had to pick up people off the street after accidents. After traumatic experiences like that you tend to feel that safety really does come before convenience."

Several students stated that this decision will influence them to move off 700 North. Tim Knudson, 26, a physics graduate student from MacLean, Va. said he will move, but he still agrees with the council's decision.

"This is not a singular issue," Mayor Jenkins said. "What we do, we do for the benefit of the whole community. This decision won't solve (all the environmental) problems. People in Provo need to start examining their driving habits."

Full zip code helps holiday mail arrive

By GREG F. BROWN
Universe Staff Writer

It's the holiday season for giving, and as you're giving there is a good chance that you are mailing. The U.S. Post Office has some suggestions to help you get your packages and letters to their destinations on time.

Beverly Burge, communications manager for the Postal Service, said it's important to pay particular attention to correct street and apartment numbers and directions, such as east, west, north and south.

There are several other hints to help Christmas mail arrive on time.

Mailers should be careful to include accurate locations such as street, avenue, road, place and drive. Abbreviations without punctuation should be used whenever possible. Addresses should be written entirely in capital letters.

Zip codes should be written on the same line with the city and state, and using the full nine-digit zip code is helpful. Full zip codes are available at your local post offices.

Each year thousands of letters and parcels are delayed or misdirected because of errors in the address, Burge said.

When addressing a package, it is a good idea to put the address in the bottom right hand corner and the return address in the upper left hand corner on one side only. This will prevent any confusion as to which is which.

Packages and parcels should weigh no more than 70 pounds. They can measure up to 108 inches in length and girth combined.

Burge said when preparing your package you should use a good strong box and some newspaper or other kind of padding. She also suggested using packing tape, not masking tape, and avoiding tying string around the package.

WIC receives extra funds Program calls back discontinued clients

By SUE N. WANJI
Universe Staff Writer

Women, Infants and Children, a program in Utah County that provides food for nutritionally needy women and children, is calling back clients who were discontinued from the program last February because of financial problems, said the program's director.

Doreen Radford said people are being reinstated because the program received $2.78 million for the next fiscal year, which runs through October 1991.

The Utah State WIC program received $22 million from the federal government for food and administrative costs. "That's a lot of money for food," Radford said.

The program provides essential nutrients to pregnant women and children during growth and development.

To be eligible, clients must be below poverty level guidelines set by the Office of Management and Budget, live in Utah County and be at nutritional risk.

A pregnant woman with a history of miscarriages, low birth weight babies or anemic children is eligible.

She said a family with four children and a monthly income of $1,059 can also qualify for the program.

"When a child is introduced into the program, the child's blood is tested, and height, weight and head circumference are measured and plotted against the standard medical history," Radford said.

As the child remains in the program and receives cheese, milk, peanut butter and other food items, these measurements are taken every six months.

The child's measurements are plotted again and assessed to see if the child is progressing in the program, she said.

Carla Benson, a 22-year-old Provo woman with two children, said, "My neighbor told me about the program when I was five months pregnant with my first child. I made an appointment, and I've been on the program for four years."

Benson said WIC has taught her about nutrition and how to care for a child. "My children eat well and look healthy," she said.

Radford said women are scheduled for a 45-minute class once a month. They are taught the importance of breast-feeding and a nutritious diet during pregnancy.

Tammy, 26, of Provo, is a mother of two children and also a participant in the WIC program. "I was introduced to the program by my mother," said Tammy, who asked that her last name not be used.

"I was on the program with my first child for a year and (then) I quit," she said. "I just started the program three months ago with my second child."

Radford said children on the program are scheduled for appointments every one or two months, depending on the child's condition.

"If the child is not doing well, he or she is scheduled monthly," she said.

Children who qualify for WIC are kept in the program until they are 5 years old.

WIC was started in March 1982 and has an average of 300 new clients each month.

Lights help pay for nursing school

By STACY VAN
BLANKENSTEIN
Universe Staff Writer

The LDS Hospital volunteer auxiliary unit is lighting the way for nursing students to receive scholarships.

The scholarship funds will come from donations people make to have a light placed on a Christmas tree near the entrance of the hospital. The Christmas lights are placed on the tree in remembrance or in honor of a loved one.

The sponsored event is called "Lights for Learning Tree." For a donation of $3, a person can buy a Christmas light.

The scholarships will be available to third- or fourth-year nursing students who are potential employees of LDS Hospital. The stipulation of receiving the scholarships is that the student must commit to work at the hospital full-time for a year or part-time for two years, said Craig Rasmussen, LDS Hospital spokesperson.

The people of the volunteer auxiliary unit believe nurses are the heart of the hospital, said Bertie Scheidell, volunteer auxiliary unit president. Their unique combination of training, skills and compassion helps bring healing to their patients, she said.

Participating in the event is a way of showing the patients and their families great appreciation, said Melanie Harrow, certified nurse of oncology at LDS Hospital. This is a unique way to recognize and to give thanks to former patients. For more information contact Diana Strong, volunteer coordinator for LDS Hospital, at 321-1771.

Orem City to improve recycling plan

By GREG F. BROWN
Universe Staff Writer

Although it already has the most extensive recycling plan in Utah County, Orem City hopes to step up the pace in January, said a representative for Orem City's Public Works Department.

Ott Dameron said Orem has some bins for paper collection and one for aluminum. The city hopes to purchase five bins that will be partitioned for collection of paper, aluminum, three types of glass — brown, green and clear — and some plastics.

Dameron said he knows of other cities that are studying the problem of recycling, but none that has actually implemented a program to the extent Orem City has.

Dave Frandsen, chairman of the Recycling Committee, said Orem is a step ahead of other cities in recycling because of foresight on the part of the city council.

Another service that Orem offers right now is disposal of motor oil. Orem has contracted with two private businesses, Pep Boys and Lube Doc, for the disposal of oil.

Dameron said citizens can bring their oil to the Department of Public Works during business hours, and it will be taken care of for them.

Frandsen said this is better than having people dump oil in a field somewhere.

CRASH

In Washington, the National Transportation Safety Board said it was dispatching a six-person team of experts in highway and hazardous material investigations.

The interstate was blocked in both directions, hampering efforts to remove the injured to hospitals in Athens and Cleveland. Helicopters from Knoxville and Chattanooga helped with the evacuation.

Joe Wilson, spokesman for the Bradley County Emergency Management Agency, said accidents occurred six miles each way from a bridge over the Hiwassee River, where the worst of the accident was centered.

Bradley Memorial treated 24 people, and Athens Community Hospital received 20 people. People were treated for lacerations, multiple trauma, burns, fractures, contusions and smoke inhalation.

At least six seriously injured people were airlifted to Chattanooga's Erlanger Hospital, and one was transported to the University of Tennessee Medical Center in Knoxville, Whaley said.

He said about 20 of the 51 injured had been released from hospitals.

Some state police troopers were overcome by fumes shortly after the accident, but officials said the danger had dissipated by midday. A propane tanker involved in the wreck was not damaged, officials said.

OPINION

Have a hug-o-war

The first wave of hostages are home. More than 150 Americans who had been trapped in Iraq and Kuwait ended four months as hostages when their plane touched down in Maryland Monday.

U.S. officials have said they plan to charter another flight from Baghdad in three or four days to bring the rest of the estimated 750 Americans home.

UNIVERSE OPINION

It's a great Christmas present for Americans who will spend the holidays with their families, but it doesn't signal the end. U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said, "In these past few days as (Saddam) has released hostages, he has simultaneously continued to build up his deployments in Kuwait, to enhance his fortifications and to add additional forces to the region."

While we watch the news in front of our Christmas trees, we can't help but wish that somehow we could work out a peaceful solution. Perhaps the thought was best expressed in a Shel Silverstein poem. It may be silly, but Silverstein suggested a "hug-o-war" instead of international or personal tug-o-wars. Not a bad idea.

*"I will not play at tug-o-war.
I'd rather play at hug-o-war,
where everyone hugs
instead of tugs,
where everyone giggles
and rolls on the rug,
where everyone kisses,
and everyone grins,
and everyone cuddles,
and everyone wins."*

At Christmas, it's easier to imagine compromise and recognize its benefits. It's easier to tolerate alternate beliefs and lifestyles. It's easier to believe in miracles and a world at peace.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Daily Universe gladly accepts letters to the editor. All letters must be typed, double-spaced and are not to exceed one page. ### Good decision

To the Editor:

Over the past few months the crisis in the Persian Gulf has been of great concern. Now that the U.N. Security Council has given Iraq a deadline to withdraw from Kuwait, tensions are mounting and war seems imminent. We applaud the decision made by the Jerusalem Center Executive Council and the Board of Trustees to close the Jerusalem Center for Winter Semester 1991.

We question, however, the method by which those students enrolled for Winter Semester 1991 were informed. The Jerusalem Center and BYU showed almost no tact and little concern for the feelings of the students by making the announcement to the general public before the students were notified.

Although we realize that letters have allegedly been sent to the students to inform them of the decision; as of Dec. 10, six days after the decision was made, no official notice has been received. We feel a higher level of professionalism and regard is deserved in situations of this nature.

Rude athletes

To the Editor:

On Dec. 1, we unfortunately made the trip back from Honolulu, Hawaii, with the BYU football team. We have never been with a more inconsiderate, rude group of people in all our years of travel.

They wouldn't take their seats so we could even leave. They were disruptive to the other passengers who were trying to get some sleep. They caused a good deal of aggravation and problems for the stewards and stewardesses.

They were asked to stay seated until the rest of us could get off to make new connections because we were running so late. Instead, they blocked the aisles and we had another two-hour wait because we couldn't get off the plane. Ty Detmer's winning of the Heisman was certainly tarnished by the conduct of the team as a whole. Maybe we should have a special class for football players teaching them manners and respect for others. They are not the heroes everyone thinks they are.

Council cares

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to clear up some of the confusion and address some of the concerns that have arisen concerning the Dress and Grooming Standards.

Recently, the Student Advisory Council passed a new proposal that would write the Dress and Grooming Standard according to a format that bases the standard on general principles such as modesty and cleanliness. As chair of the committee that presented this proposal, I know of all the research and discussion, work and concern that went into this effort. The new proposal would greatly shorten and simplify the standard that we have now, while still adhering to gospel principles. The wording of our proposal is different, but I believe the message and intent is the same.

As many students are aware, the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints recently released a statement concerning "Dress and Appearance" that was included in their booklet entitled "For the Strength of Youth." This was a source on which we based many of our decisions.

This proposal is currently being considered by other committees on campus such as the University's Ad Hoc Honor Code Review Committee. I believe there is a genuine feeling among administrators, faculty and students that the university is ready to re-evaluate our current standard and enact any necessary or beneficial changes.

I know work has and is being done and the student input we have received has been carefully and seriously considered.

Recently a letter appeared in The Daily Universe that discussed some comments Lanny Brown, executive vice president of the council, supposedly made at a floor meeting at Deseret Towers. I do not know what he said at this meeting. I do know that I have been working closely with Lanny Brown all semester and I know him to be a conscientious and effective leader. He has been very concerned with the Dress and Grooming Standard and very supportive of our committee's efforts.

My experience with the Student Advisory Council has been that it is truly a viable council for addressing student concerns. I encourage students to approach members of the Student Advisory Council in order to make their opinions heard on issues that affect them at BYU.

No oil, no defense

To the Editor:

In response to David Lewis' desire to go to war and his reasoning that this war is not about oil, I'd like to invite him to save human lives down in my country. He could fight death squads or communist guerrillas. The choice is his. They both are killing innocent human lives.

Will you die for the human lives in my country, Dave? There is not a drop of oil on Salvadorian soil. Does that make a difference?

No, this is not a letter to give a solution to the gulf crisis. I just want to mention that I attended the Soapbox where students voiced their opinion about war and was very pleased to see the students at BYU finally getting involved in an international issue. I wished more students could have attended it.

I also hoped most of the students would read a nice front-page article in The Daily Universe the next day. However, I was annoyed when I found a very small and biased article which distorted the event by characterizing it as if a majority of the students supported war when it wasn't true. Not only that, the article was printed on the next-to-last page, downplaying its importance.

This was not your typical Soapbox. It was an event where students voiced a strong opposition to President Bush's policy. It is because of coverage like this that BYU students still sit around while soldiers our age, are about to die thousands of miles away.

R. Antillon
El Salvador

Americans unite

To the Editor:

As tension rises in the gulf, the United States almost seems to be reliving those difficult years during the Vietnam War when Americans were deeply divided over our involvement in that conflict. But whether we are for war or peace, Americans are in the gulf crisis together.

I see no reason why anyone should be "embarrassed" or "horrified" because some of their fellow citizens do not concur with them right now on the use of force. If they are as indignant as they seem, maybe they should lead by example and join our gallant army in the field.

Now, realistically speaking, it is up to the professional soldiers to execute the nation's policy in the Persian Gulf. The U.S. Army has the men and the equipment necessary to liberate Kuwait and knock out Saddam Hussein. However, the army will also shed blood in the process. Therefore, we must act well in our stewardship over the armed forces; politicians must be statesmen, the people must speak so that the will of this land will be known.

Without the support of the people in what I predict will be a drawn-out conflict with Iraq, even Bush's most decisive and well-executed plans stand in grave danger of long-term failure.

Craig Livingston
Granada Hills, Calif.

Bush wants war

To the Editor:

I have rotten news for all of you who are hoping that Bush is able to effect a peaceful end to the gulf crisis — Bush doesn't want a peaceful solution to the crisis.

If you think he does, you're only kidding yourself.

The United States, as the world's dominant power, has manipulated the international system to fit our best interest, and ever since, we have spent millions of hours and lives and billions of dollars to maintain the status quo of this favorable system.

With the fall of communism, we hoped it would be less costly to maintain this status quo, but along came Saddam Hussein. He became a serious threat to a useful system of distribution on which the world depends.

Whenever there is a real threat to the status quo we have created, whether the Panama Canal is threatened or there is a risk of mass Libyan terrorist attacks, we may use force to protect the system. We are one of those situations now.

Saddam's most astute move would be to pull out of Iraq, accept the loss of face, and begin stockpiling weapons. At last count, Iraq had five missile research complexes, six chemical and biological weapons research or development plants and three nuclear weapons research facilities or reactors.

Some experts suspect that Iraq has nuclear weapons within two to five years.

No doubt, if Saddam pulls out of Kuwait now, he will begin his preparations for his of vindication. Who will be there to stop him then? We don't stop him now, will anyone ever stop him?

Should Bush attack now, while we have firm footing nearby, a massive buildup, a military strategy, U.S. support, airplane fuel and some public support, or should Bush wait until later when we have none of the above in place, and when we are sure to lose many more dollars and many more lives?

No, Bush doesn't want Hussein pulled out, but he needs our support. He attempts to politically legitimize necessary military action.

On-the-run students need healthy snacks

Each Wednesday the opinion page will include an article on nutrition written by a student in a BYU community nutrition class. Articles are edited for accuracy and clarity by a member of the Food Science Department.

Vending machines usually are a junk food junky's paradise, but not anymore. Because of the health craze, BYU students are finding more nutritious snacks in vending machines.

1. Fruit drinks and fruit juices are not the same thing. Fruit drinks contain less real fruit juices and more sugar and artificial flavorings. Cans or cartons of pure apple juice or orange juice are good choices.

2. Choose dry roasted or raw nuts instead of candy bars. Although most nuts are salted, they do contain less calories and more protein than candy bars, which means they provide longer lasting energy.

3. If you are craving something salty and crunchy, leave potato chips and pretzels behind and choose a bag of popcorn instead. Potato chips contain three times the calories and times the fat found in popcorn.

4. Fresh fruit is finding its way into the vending market and is always an outstanding choice.

5. Milk and other dairy products are smart snacks. Watch for skim two percent milk and light yogurt. Keep down the fat and calorie count.

6. Fresh vegetables with dip. Tossed green salads can be found in some machines. BYU dates their products to ensure freshness.

7. Stay away from fruit pies. Even though they contain the long processing leaves not but lots of calories and sodium.

8. A variety of prepared sandwiches are available and are just good as homemade. They also more filling than other snack items.

9. Bagels are a good source of energy. Zapping them in the microwave for a few seconds will soften them and make them easy to eat.

10. Instead of soft drinks, choose milk. There is no way around it, milk is one of the best sources of calcium and protein you can get. People need milk in their diets. An 8-ounce glass of whole milk provides 19 percent of the minimum daily requirement of protein, 30 percent of the calcium and 24 percent of the riboflavin for an average adult. The drawback is that it provides 5 grams of saturated fat.

11. As always, make sure you eat a variety of nutritious foods. A variety of healthy snacks will help you obtain all the vitamins and minerals you need to stay healthy.

Who to visit causes conflict

Holidays can be stressful for families

By JILL G. JONES
Universe Staff Writer

Where to go for Christmas is a question that creates conflict in the relationship of many married couples.

Brent Barlow, family science professor and marriage enhancement instructor at BYU, said, "The decision of which family to spend the holidays with is a common problem with newlyweds."

For the first few years, it is hard on the couple's families because they are used to having their child come home, Barlow said. Now that their child is married, they still want their child to come home with his or her spouse.

Simon Keochakian, a counselor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, said in a recent Deseret News article that "the holidays can be a family's most difficult time."

College students may have special problems. In school, they learn to become independent, making their own decisions about relationships and careers, Keochakian said.

When they come home for the holiday "they tend to fall into the old roles," he said. "Mom does the laundry, and they are expected to follow rules laid down by parents."

Keochakian said visiting in-laws can bring its own set of problems. For example, take the situation of a married couple visiting the husband's mother.

"Within minutes, the wife gets to see her husband change from a confident assertive, successful spouse into a submissive child," Keochakian said. "This can be terribly disconcerting to the wife. Your spouse has changed into someone you don't even know."

One way of avoiding potential trouble is to pre-arrange an escape signal, he said. For example, tugging on an earlobe could be a sign that a blowup is near and it's time to leave.

"Imagine a worst-case scenario and make arrangements for dealing with it," Keochakian said.

Ken Graham, 26, an MBA student from Denver, Colo., said both he and his wife are from Denver and they used to fight about how much time they spent at each parent's house. "We would spend eight hours on the road traveling to Denver and then five hours just driving from house to house," he said.

"We finally decided to act as if our parents lived in different parts of the country and visit only one parent's house per trip," Graham said.

Sandy Jessrick, 22, a physical education major from Phoenix, Ariz., said she and her husband used to argue about their holiday plans, until they decided to trade off where to go for the holidays.

COMPETITION

The Elie Wiesel Prize in Ethics — The Elie Wiesel Foundation for Humanity is sponsoring an essay contest intended to challenge undergraduate senior students in colleges and universities nationwide to give attention to and analyze the ethical questions and issues facing students today. The Foundation will offer the following prizes: 1st Prize $5,000; 2nd Prize $3,000; 3rd Prize $2,000 and three honorable mentions. Essays should be between 3,000 and 4,000 words. Further details concerning style, deadlines, etc., will be posted in the display case of the Maeser Building. No more than three essays will be submitted from any one college or university so all entries must be submitted through the Associate Dean of General and Honors Education, 350C MSRB. ## Newsletter helps foreign students

By NANCY L. WALKER
Universe Staff Writer

Throughout the school year, the international student adviser receives a number of phone calls from BYU international students who are unable to return to the United States.

"Every semester I receive five to 10 phone calls from various points of entry into the United States. Students who are trying to return to school have failed to take the appropriate legal documents with them which would enable them to re-enter the United States," Enoc Flores said.

However, the International Student Office provides a way for international students to be prepared.

The International Student Office, a department of the College of Student Life, publishes the "International Horizons" newsletter to advise and inform the international students at BYU, as well as the university community, Flores said.

"The main purposes of the newsletter are to advise the students, inform the students and keep them updated on immigration regulations," said Shirley Burrows, assistant international student adviser.

The newsletter advises and informs students and the university community of any changes in legal matters pertaining to student status, possible employment and scholarship opportunities, Flores said.

According to the Fall 1990 issue of the newsletter, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Services is getting more strict when it comes to maintaining, changing and adjusting status.

Once a student has been admitted to the U.S. on student status, certain obligations must be met in order to stay in the United States.

The newsletter is published approximately two or three times a year — always at the beginning of Fall Semester and at the end of Winter Semester.

All international students registered at BYU are supposed to receive the newsletter.

However, Flores said this may not always occur.

"It is important for students to receive the newsletter. We receive their address labels from the administration records. If they do not receive one, they probably need to update their address with the administration," he said.

Some students may not realize the importance of the information contained in the newsletter until after they have left for the Christmas holiday and are unable to return to the United States.

According to the Fall 1990 newsletter, students must remember to have a Form I-20 endorsed two weeks before leaving the United States.

If a student has changed majors or if the form has expired, it may be necessary to apply for a new form.

Form I-20 must be available to authorities at the port of entry. If a new form has been endorsed, proof of finances may be requested as well.

Exams keep flying force fit

Flight surgeons ensure healthy pilots

MICHAEL A. GUELLER
Universe Staff Writer

In 1947 Capt. Charles Yeager of the U.S. Air Force flew the X-1 rocket-powered research plane faster than the speed of sound. Yeager is still flying and prides himself in his 20/20 vision," said Capt. Curtis Manning, M.D. of the U.S. Air Force stationed at Edwards Air Force Base in California's Mojave desert.

He serves officially as a consultant at the Air Force Flight Test Center, and at his age of 67, he is in excellent physical condition. Manning is a flight surgeon. His job is taking care of pilots, specifically fighter pilots. He examines them regularly to "keep a fit flying force," he said.

Manning's colleague is Capt. Craig Patterson, a graduate of Northwestern Medical School. He has been working as a flight surgeon at Edwards for two years. Patterson said, "The most challenging aspect of my job is handling the variety of things which my work entails. I am involved with entire flight squadrons, environmental concerns and the health of families on base." Patterson said flight surgeons spend 20 to 30 percent of their time dealing with flight obligations. This includes physically examining all personnel — pilots, navigators and engineers — who take to the skies. Flight surgeons are also required to fly four times a month. Patterson said, "The flying part of my job is interesting, although breaking the sound barrier, Mach 1.1 or about 700 m.p.h., was nothing spectacular because you don't hear the boom."

Manning said, "Flying in jets is a fun way to pay back the time I owe the Air Force for putting me through medical school."

Manning has flown in top-notch fighter aircraft such as the F-15 and F-16.

"Today's jets are limited by the pilot since most aviators can only sustain about nine G's, or nine times the force of gravity on their bodies," he said.

Though he has never blacked-out from excessive G forces, Manning said he has experienced "graying out," or the loss of color vision while flying at top-gun speeds.

"The flying part of my job is interesting, although breaking the sound barrier, Mach 1.1, was nothing spectacular because you don't hear the boom."

men," Manning said. The "pair of pants" fits over the flight suit, and pilots voluntarily flex their legs to keep blood from filling up in their legs.

David Carlson, 24, a senior majoring in business finance from Burlington, Ky., is enrolled in the Air Force's Reserved Officer Training Corps. He recently was examined by a flight surgeon in order to qualify for navigator schooling in Texas. "The doctor told me this would be the major disqualifying exam," Carlson said.

Manning said, "The vision test for fliers is tough initially."

Once the initial flying physical is passed, standards are not as strict, he said.

"A pilot with high blood pressure, for example, would receive a waiver and continue flying as he was under-

"G-LOC or the gravity-induced loss of consciousness occurs during subjection to large G exposures, ranging anywhere from 5 G's and above.

A G-suit combats the drawing away of blood to the brain by inflating and compressing around the calves, thighs and lower abdomen."

going treatment."

A highlight at Edwards Air Force Base includes support for NASA operations, Manning said. He took a two-month training course known as the AMP, or the Aerospace Medicine Primary, to specialize in the care and health supervision of aviators and astronauts.

"The space shuttle regularly lands here, and we are on standby for problem situations," Manning said.

In relation to the Middle East standoff, Patterson said, "Our bags have always been packed, and some people have been deployed, but our needs haven't changed. Testing aircraft is our task," he said.

Curtis Manning's wife said, "I try not to worry about Curtis flying."

Ensemble to perform tonight

JACKIE HATCH
Universe Staff Writer

Group For New Music, a contemporary, avant-garde ensemble, will present a concert tonight in the Mad Recital Hall, HFAC.

The program will include an electronic tape recording of "Story of a Quasi-sharp Minor" by Hungarian composer Zoltan Pongracz, "Reading" by Erik Satie, and "Olson III" by Terry Riley.

ley and "Thomas," a cantata by the group's director, Michael Hicks.

Hicks said Riley "is generally classified as a pioneer in minimalism" like composer Philip Glass.

The "Olson III" piece has three sopranos, two pianos and a violin, Hicks said, and consists of every performer playing the same part at his or her own time.

Sandy Garrard, a music performance and psychology major from Provo, is a cellist in the Hicks piece. The cantata "uses special effects" on the cello, she said, and one can almost hear more from inside the group of performers than from the audience.

Foss' "Reading" has the performers playing specified notes and reading from a list of words at will, Hicks said. "It is a mobile in music," he said, "churning, shifting, never quite the same." The concert begins at 7:30 and admission is free.

Dancers practice imitation in HFAC

JANNAE DUREFY
Universe Staff Writer

You might have imitated someone in the past just to make fun of them. Then again, maybe you haven't. However, the Impulse dance group here at BYU is taking imitation seriously.

Monday the group was in the display area of the HFAC imitating and interpreting the movement of people as they walked by, said Les Ditson, the director of the group. Owayne Donkersgoed, a 27-year-old senior in human communications from Los Angeles, Calif., said he didn't realize they were imitating him as he stopped to look at the paintings. "I knew they were doing something, but I didn't think it was intentional," he said.

Ditson said the experiment is often done by dance groups in the East and is supposed to help dancers get rid of their inhibitions.

"It takes a certain amount of courage to do this because you violate the social order," he said.

Lou Eastman said he often comes to the HFAC to look at the paintings.

"Because I'm a musician and photographer I tend to pick up on strange things faster. But this caught me off guard, that's for sure," he said.

Marcie Lamoreaux, a 20-year-old junior in modern dance from Provo, is a member of Impulse. She said it is sometimes difficult to imitate others. "You really don't know what to expect."

Ditson said the group will be doing the experiment again in the HFAC today at 3:30 p.m. and would like to encourage people to come and participate.

Provo Tabernacle hosts local choral society

JACKIE HATCH
Universe Staff Writer

The Utah Valley Choral Society will be debuting three original works of local composers in its annual Christmas concert at 7 p.m. in the Provo Tabernacle.

Susan Hartman, the associate director of the choir, said the program will include "Coventry Carol" and "Pat A Pan" by "Doc" Taylor and

"What Christmas Means" by Joyce Stumphy.

Hartman will conduct the choir, with accompanists Ann Moyle and Sonya Hammock on the organ and piano.

The "Coventry Carol" is "an arrangement for male voices," Taylor said, and has the melody of "What Child Is This?" recurring in the piece.

"Pat A Pan" has the melody from the carol "O Come, O Come Emmanuel" and is for a mixed-voice chorus, Taylor said.

Hartman said Santa will be in the foyer at the end of the concert to greet the children.

Admission is $2 per person or $10 per family.

If a food item is brought, $1 will be deducted from the admission cost.

According to Hartman, all food donations will be given to a Provo food bank.

Scholarship cuts hurt small sports

Editor's Note: This is the second installment in a three-part series.

By ROBERT MAYER
Universe Sports Writer

Tell any department that it is going to receive less financial support, and it will naturally be against it. With the NCAA's proposal to make a 10 percent across-the-board athletic scholarship cut hanging over them, BYU coaches are seeing more than just red; they see the state of college sports hanging in a precarious state.

Part of the problem is the original distribution. Football, for example, has 95 scholarship-supported players for 24 starting positions. Men's track and field, on the other hand, has 14, which are divided up between 21 track and field events and seven cross-country spots. The proposed cuts would take 1 1/2 scholarships away from a program already low on scholarship support.

With some college football and basketball programs, a student athlete sometimes receives full tuition for four years but gets little playing time. In the smaller sports, with less money scholarships, the team's star performer may end up getting a smaller financial-aid package than the bench player in football or basketball.

The proposals would cut 10 percent from each sport, but with football, it would mean cutting third- and fourth-string players, and basketball would lose one or two third-stringers.

With the smaller sports, like swimming and golf, it could mean a potential starter lost from the roster.

"If pro football can get by with 45 spots on a roster," said Sherald James, men's cross country coach, "why can't college?"

Football coach LaVell Edwards said he would hate to see any cuts. "Football has been cut enough over the last few years. They've got it down to a workable situation now."

Coaches do not see athletic scholarships as a way of paying athletes to play. Instead, it is a way of getting an education. "I am against cutting back funds that help an athlete complete an education," said Lu Wallace, women's athletic director.

BYU women's golf coach Gary Howard said about the cuts, "I am concerned that you're preventing some kids from getting an education. In golf, some kids can pay. In other cases, say track and field, you're dealing with people of lower income."

Glenn Tuckett, BYU athletic director, said, "I'm opposed to cutting the grants-in-aid. This is the last place any cuts should take place."

Willard Hirschi, BYU men's track coach, confirmed Howard's statement. "In many cases, if we can't get a kid on a scholarship, we can't get a kid into school."

BYU baseball coach Gary Pullins said, "I think the NCAA has done a marvelous job in the past five years regarding minimum entrance requirements. But now they're taking a step in reverse. They're hurting the student athlete."

Coaches also cite recruiting problems. "We're not able to recruit the very best," said Mako Sakamoto, BYU men's gymnastics coach. The best gymnasts, he said, want full-ride scholarships, and with the proposed cuts, BYU gymnastics would not be able to offer such full-ride scholarships. "It's kind of ironic that in the sport of gymnastics there is no money for the young men who spend their youth in clubs training so that they can strive for college," he said.

Women's swimming coach Stan Crump says the balance of power in certain sports would shift unevenly. "If swimming were a dynamic sport in Utah, we wouldn't complain," said the coach of last year's seventh-best women's college swimming team. With fewer scholarships, he said, See CUTS on page 9

Cougars face Sun Devils tonight on home court

By JOHN MILLER
Universe Sports Writer

BYU men's basketball team hosts Arizona State University, today at 7:30 p.m. in the Marriott Center.

ASU is led by some of the most experienced coaches in the nation. Its coaching staff has combined for 99 head coaching wins at the Division I level.

Head coach Bill Frieder leads the way with 210. Assistant Lynn Archibald, the former University of Utah coach, has 167 wins. The other assistant, George McQuam, has 122 wins at Cal-State Fullerton.

BYU is coming off an impressive showing against No. 14-ranked St. John's University where the Cougars lost by only five points, 67-62, in the championship game of the Cougar Classic.

"The three teams we have lost to have a combined record of 16 and 1 loss far against other opponents," BYU coach Roger Reid said.

ASU's tenacious defense is a major reason for the Sun Devils' quick start. For the year, ASU has forced 10 turnovers (an average of 22 per game) and committing just 65 (13 per game).

"We've got to eliminate some of our mistakes," Reid said. "We've got to execute better. We are throwing the ball away too many times. We are beating ourselves."

Assistant coach Tony Ingle said, "ASU is probably the best defensive team we will play all year."

Through ASU's first five games, four different Sun Devils have led the team in scoring.

All five starters are averaging in double figures, led by senior center Isaac Austin who is averaging 16.4 points a game and pulling down 9.2 rebounds a contest.

ASU is also starting two freshmen, Jamal Faulkner and Steven Smith, who are both averaging 12 points per game.

The other starters for the Sun Devils are senior Tarence Wheeler, who is averaging 14 points per game, and junior Lynn Collins, who is adding 12 points a contest.

"They have great individual players at each position, so it's hard to focus in on one player. This might be the best basketball team we face all year," Ingle said.

BYU leads the series 21-18 against ASU. In last year's contest, BYU pulled off the victory in Tempe 65-64, after ASU scored the last seven points of the contest. ASU's last victory against BYU came in 1978.

The game will be televised live on KSL-TV and KSL Radio. It will also be on tape-delayed basis at 10:30 p.m. on KBYU-TV.

CUTS

programs would rely more on the local walk-on pool, putting the strength of the sport completely in the hands of programs such as Stanford and UCLA.

"Ultimately, the great swimmer would forget about college," Crump said.

"He would train at a community college, or concentrate on a club program."

Relying on such a walk-on pool would hurt the BYU track program.

Hirschi said many walk-ons try out after the enrollment cap at BYU has been reached, thus preventing them from being admitted to the university. Last year, the men's track program had no walk-ons.

"The USC track program went from a contender to an also-ran when the scholarship limit was initially dropped to 14, because they had no walk-on program," he said.

Private universities that cost more than public universities may be in trouble also. The cuts may make some sports give part tuition scholarships, not full, forcing the student to come up with the remainder. The local, less expensive public school then appears to be the far better choice for the student.

Bowl games are big business

By MICHAEL H. SANCHEZ
Universe Sports Writer

Without the blessings of the NCAA benefit play-off system, most post-season bowl committees start their annual scramble in mid-October for the best college football teams they can buy. According to the NCAA, over $62 million in payouts will be received by college teams in post-season bowl games this year.

More and more college football is becoming big business," ESPN Sports Analyst Beano Cook said.

The Rose Bowl, played in Pasadena, Calif., on Jan. 1, pays out $10 million to each of its teams, Washington and Iowa. And they don't even play for the national championship.

The Orange Bowl, played in Miami, hosted the mythical national championship game for the last two years. In last year's game, Notre Dame defeated Colorado and won the national championship.

In this year's edition, the same two teams will face each other for the second year in a row. There is also the matter of $4.2 million guaranteed to each team. For Notre Dame, a major independent college team which does not share its earnings with a conference or league, "a guaranteed purse of $4.2 million will support nearly the entire school athletic program," said Dick Rosenthal, Athletic Director at Notre Dame.

Is there an advantage to picking, selecting and committing prospective bowl teams early? The answer is unclear if not divided.

According to Bruce Binkowski, information director for the Sea World Holiday Bowl, "being tied in with the champion of a conference seems the safest way to go. Being connected to the WAC, we have been able to put out a quality product."

"Year after year," Binkowski said, "the WAC champion has proved to be a great opponent against the at large team we have selected. We think that the BYU-Texas A&M match-up will be one of the all-time best."

BYU and Texas A&M will earn $1.2 million each for their Dec. 29 encounter.

Teams like BYU, Air Force, Wyoming and Colorado State who are playing in post-season bowl games share their winnings with the other schools in their conference. Teams in the WAC not participating in bowl games will receive approximately $170,000.

"This is a reason that some people believe that becoming a major independent has its advantages," Cook said.

The Freedom Bowl, hosted in Anaheim, Calif., pits the Oregon Ducks against the WAC runner-up Colorado State Rams. Both Oregon and Colorado State will receive $600,000 for their participation.

Wyoming, the third place team in the WAC, will take on California in the Copper Bowl played in Tucson, Ariz., on Dec 31. Each team will receive $600,000.

Another WAC team, Air Force, which won the Commander-In-Chief Trophy, will play Ohio State in the 32nd Annual Liberty Bowl on Dec. 27 in Memphis, Tenn. Air Force and Ohio State will gain $1 million each.

Former hostages tell their stories

Associated Press

Donald G. Whatley arrived in Kuwait on Aug. 1 at 10:30 p.m. He was at the Iraqi border by around 1 a.m., had a sandwich and was soon in bed.

By 3:45 a.m., "the sky was saturated with helicopters; missile fire was showering down over my head." He never got a chance to relieve Charlie Amos, another American oil worker who was to have headed home Aug. 2.

"About 25 soldiers drove up (to the oil rig site) and they had guns," Amos said from his home in Gilmer, Texas. "It was tense. We were taken into custody at 5:30 a.m. By 6:30 a.m., we were in Iraq."

It wasn't until Tuesday that Amos and Whatley let down. It wasn't until they'd finally collapsed into the arms of family, gathered around the kitchen table or nestled deep into familiar blankets that they truly knew rest.

"I've had four or five hours of sleep now and feel real fine," Whatley said from Shreveport, La. "But the will-power's gone. All during it, I wouldn't let the Iraqis get into my head and break my mind. ... Now I'm exhausted."

"It's been such a long trip," Whatley, 48, said before joining his wife for breakfast, bacon and eggs like on just about any day.

Amos said he was perhaps most stunned by an unexpected shock of sympathy for the guards left behind. After praying day and night for his freedom, "It was actually rather emotional saying goodbye."

During Amos' stay at a barren site near Syria, Iraqi guards played pool with their captives and scared up a few old spy novels. If he wanted a little exercise, Saddam's men went along for the run.

"It was a group activity ... they were actually friendly," said Amos, 60, who with Whatley works for Santa Fe Drilling Co. "They didn't like what they were doing any better than we did."

Guards told Amos, who has been drilling oil in the Middle East for the better part of 20 years, that he was being held at an abandoned phosphates mine. But, he said haltingly, "It didn't look like that."

The site, he said, looked more like a military or chemical installation. "I tried not to think about it," Amos said.

American Heritage soc-hop to benefit needy families

Universe Services

The First American Heritage Benefit Soc-Hop Party to help local needy families will be today from 8 to 11 p.m. in the center basketball courts of the George Albert Smith Fieldhouse.

Wave Tech, the winner of the 1990 BYU Battle of DJ's, will provide music videos, stereo sound and visual entertainment. BYU's Cosmo, radio station KJQ and Bessie the Milk Beast will also be there.

The BYU vs. Arizona State basketball game will be shown on a big screen television along with a soc-hop dance on the courts. There will be door prizes, T-shirts and raffle drawings.

Representatives from BYU's

Hosting Center will collect donations at the door. The proceeds will go directly to 28 local needy families as well as another local charity. Monetary donations are preferred, although other donations will not be turned down.

For those that cannot attend but would still like to make a donation, contributions will be accepted at the American Heritage office, located in 2303 SFLC.

The idea for the benefit party began when American Heritage professor Frank W. Fox taught a class on economic injustice. After the lecture, many students expressed to their teaching assistant a desire to make a difference. Some of the T.A.s said they decided to turn their students' rhetoric into reality.

U.S. troops in gulf eat 1.2 million meals a day

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The supply line to American troops in the Persian Gulf starts with their stomachs. For a force soon to reach 400,000, that's a daunting challenge — requiring 1.2 million meals a day.

That hefty order, worth more than $600 million to Defense Department food vendors so far, is just a piece of a burgeoning industry as the Pentagon scrambles to buy and ship supplies to troops in the Mideast and its contractors reap unexpected business.

The government also has spent $600 million for clothing and medical supplies, with millions more going for fuel, parts, equipment, ammunition and other supplies.

The scope of the supply effort is giving pause to some military planners, who worry that the inevitability of problems in sustaining such an operation will be used to advance arguments for early use of force if Saddam Hussein ignores a Jan. 15 deadline to end his occupation of Kuwait.

So far, there have been only isolated shortages, according to Defense Department officials.

Buying is just half the task. The Pentagon has to get the goods 7,000 miles to Saudi Arabia and other Mideast points as it masses a 60-day or better supply cushion.

Holiday season can be fattening

By JILL C. KAU
Senior Reporter

The Christmas season brings with it chocolate-covered Santa marshmallows, fudge with macadamia nuts, cherry-filled cookies and plenty more tantalizing temptations — all guaranteed to be deliciously fattening. If plans aren't made now to prevent it, one could become the size of a house — a gingerbread house.

"Decide now that you want to maintain a regular exercise program and not gain weight during the holidays," said Nora Nyland, director of the dietetics program of the BYU food science and nutrition department.

She suggested using positive imagery, which is imagining oneself enjoying the party, eating small portions and "handling the situation the way you want to handle it."

Peggy McClellan, registered dietitian for Utah Valley Regional Medical Center, said, "There are two ways to handle the situation. Taste a bite of your favorite things, but don't finish the dessert, or pick two or three favorite desserts and eat only them."

It's important to avoid foods high in fat, which are generally high in sugar, she added. If given the choice it is always better to pick a fruit dessert over a chocolate one.

Nyland said, "The main thing is to not feel deprived." She said people who feel deprived have a tendency to eat more than they had wanted to.

She said if you do slip up on your diet, don't let it bother you so much that you quit trying.

When throwing a party, provide diet sodas and healthy snacks such as fruit and vegetables, Nyland said.

"People are more health-conscious now," McClellan said.

Watching what goes into your mouth is as important as making sure the food is burned off.

"At least put some exercise into your holiday," Nyland said.

It may be difficult to maintain the same exercise program; it's best to walk, but if the weather isn't good, go to the mall and briskly walk around, she suggested.

Decide now to exercise and eat right during the holidays, and then if it doesn't work out, forgive yourself and get back on track, McClellan said.

For those who gain extra pounds during the holidays, the BYU food science and nutrition department offers a $45 weight control class beginning at the end of January requiring one hour a week and lasting eight weeks.
